Sympathies Always Enlisted in the Infirmities of the Veteran.

From Woodstock, Va., Herald.
There is an old soldier in Woodstock, Va., who served in the war with Mex-ico and in the war of the rebellion, Mr. Levi McInturff. He passed through Levi McInturff. He passed through both these wars without a serious wound. The hardships, however, told seriously on him, for when the grip attacked him four years ago it nearly killed him. Who can look on the in-firmities of a veteran without a feeling of the deepest sympathy? His towns-people saw him confined to his house so people saw him confined to his house so prostrated with great nervousness that he could not hold a knife and fork at the table, scarcely able to walk too, and as he attempted it, he often stumbled and fell. They saw him treated by the best talent to be had—but still he suffered on for four years, and gave up finally in despair. One day, however, he was struck by the account of a cure which had been effected by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He immediately ordered a box Pills. He immediately ordered a box and commenced taking them. He says he was greatly relieved within three days time. The blood found its way to his fingers and his hands which had been palsied assumed a natural color, and he was soon enabled to use his knife and fork at the table. He has recovered his strength to such an extent that he is able to chop wood, shock corn and do his regular work about his home. He now says he can not only walk to Woodstock, but can walk across the mountains. He is able to lift a fifty-two pound weight with one hand and says he does not know what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for these but here that they

ON THE PASCAL Regular Menkey and Parrot Time on

They are not down on the ship's articles and have no official rating. but among their mates on board the British steamship Pascal they are known respectively as Tom and Jack. The Pascal arrived the other day from Brazilian ports, and such troubles as they caused on board during the last few weeks would require a volume to relate. It was literally a monkey and parrot time, for Tom and Jack were monkeys, and in their deviltry were ably assisted by the chief engineer's pet parrot. The Pascal is a freight vesses, engaged in the trade between this port and the River Platte, touching at Rio Janeiro and other ports in Brazil en route. It was while on a trip up about three months ago that one of the crew in an unguarded moment introduced Tom among his mates. He was at enmity with another member of the crew, who, not to be outdone, went ashore and returned later with Jack. The "monks" were given the freedom of the ship, and were popular because whenever they met the would engage in a desperate fight, which their respective owners would later on continue. By and by the monkeys became fast friends, and when not entertaining the crew were secreted in some dark corner hatching up schemes whereby they could only enjoy themselver at some one's ex pense, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Then the chief engineer of the ship, feeling lonely, invested in a parrot. Other members of the crew decided that they must have something to pet and cherish, so they bought animals of various kinds. One man invested in a hedgehog. Another thought that life would not be worth living unless he had a snake to fondle. Still another acquired a slouh, and a fourth a carpincho, which also travels under the title of giant rat.

As soon as the Pascal got out of sight of land the monkeys began their deviltry, while the parrot sat meekly in the engine-room eating bananas and looking important. Tom and Jack espied him, chased him up and down the engine-room, and several times the frightened parrot narrowly escaped being caught in the engines. After a hot run the monkeys finally caught him, and while Tom held him in a tight embrace Jack relieved him of his tail and feathers. From that time the parrot was suddenly transformed, and what deviltry the monkeys overlooked he cheerfully indulged in. Indeed, so clever were his tricks that the monkeys became jea.ous, and the next time they caught him unawares they pitched him into the sea. They then turned their attention to the giant rat, which, if his pluck had been commensurate with his physique, could have eaten his tormentors without trouble. But he was a poltroon, and after chasing him from every hiding place he could find on the ship the monkeys finally caught him and sent him after the parrot

PLOT FOR A MELODRAMA.

An Abortive Banging for a Murder That Was Never Committed. Many years ago a young man, walking to the house of his brother, a yeoman, found the inn at a neighboring town very full, says the London Saturday Review. He shared the room of a merchant who was openly counting out his money. Having occasion to visit the garden and also to borrow a knife, he accepted the loan of a knife from the merchant. On returning to his room he found the chant gone. He went to bed, slept, rose early, walked to his brother's and was arrested in the afternoon for murdering the merchant. In his pocket was that tradesman's knife, and between blade and handle was a guinea of Mary and William. At the inn the merchant's empty bed was stained with blood. and, though the merchant's body was nowhere to be found, the young man was condemned for murder and hanged in chains on his brother's farm. Here a countryman observed that the body moved. It was cut down, life was reanimated and the youth fled to sea. Taken by Spaniards in South America, he rose to be warden of the gaol, and while in enjoyment of that office recognized ong some English prisoners the person for whose murder he had suffered The fact was that the merchant, while the youth was absent in the garden. discovered that he was bleeding freely from a vein which had been opened that day. He hurried to the surgeon in the dark, was seized by a press gang, served his Britannic majesty in a ship-of-war, was taken by the Spaniards, and, at last, met in a gaol of South America the very man who had been hanged for murdering him in

The poor speaker did not protest, but immediately vacated the rostrum. - Argonaut.

Growth of the Hair. The influence of diet on the growth of hair has often been discussed. It has been shown that starchy mixtures, milk and many other foods recognized as being highly nutritious, are in fact, sure death to hair growth. Chemical analysis proves that the hair is composed of five per cent of sulphur and its ash of twenty per cent of silicon and 10 per cent of manganese. The foods which contain a large per cent of the above named elements are meat, catmeal and graham. Henry pointedly says: "Nations which eat most meat have the most hair."
